

The idea of him leaving behind such great stories, knowledge and ability to move people affected me the most because it had me thinking, what would I be leaving behind if something happened to me for my daughter.

The biggest takeaway from his lecture was how to live your life but also to have fun with it. I think the most important thing was to have fun with it. Life is too short, I turned 32 this year and I often think what a crazy time it's been getting to 32 but also how fast it flew by. I plan on having fun now and achieving my goals in fun ways.
